

JEAN ELIOT'S
LETTERA Chronicle
of Society

SUSAN DEAR:—At last the summer White House has been rescued from innocuous desuetude—I love to roll that phrase under my tongue and for the pleasure of that am willing to explain if necessary that it means harmless uselessness.

It did seem a pity that after all the glory and advertising—that the State of New Jersey took to itself as the prospective summer home of the President the great mansion at Elberon should lie idle all summer. It was swept and garnished to be sure, but ignored by its illustrious tenants; and the fact that campaigns and railroad strikes, Congress in action, wars and rumors of wars kept the President chained to his desk didn't do much toward soothing the disappointment of the Jerseyites.

However, yesterday's Shadow Lawn party sent New Jersey's stock soaring and added another interesting chapter to the history of the Jersey coast, which boasts of having harbored several Presidents in their vacation days. Incidentally several members of President Wilson's household remained behind at Shadow Lawn when he and Mrs. Wilson set out on their journey to Kentucky; and there's the promise that when Congress adjourns—if Congress doesn't decide that adjournment interferes too much with business—the Chief Executive and his bride will have a few weeks rest and quiet by the seaside before the campaign wakes too strenuous.

Heard Nothing But Notification Ceremonies.

In Washington we heard nothing but the notification ceremonies—and the strike—all last week, for society, at least the Democratic and official portion thereof, marched to Shadow Lawn in force to witness the proceedings. The Marshalls, the Lansburghs, the Lanes, Secretary McAdoo, the Champ Wicks, all were there and ever so many more. This week we'll probably spend most of our time talking about the notification in the past tense instead of the future.

Plenty of Company at Bass Rocks This Summer.

How gay Bass Rocks seems to be this summer! Just now everybody has a houseful of company and there's no end of entertaining of a pleasantly informal character.

With May Adams at her picturesque cottage are Ethel Libbey, Margaret Hanan—her name is Martha, as you know, but she's always Margaret to me—and Eleanor Addison Gittings, as well as Miss Adams' fetching nieces, Margaret Howard, and Mrs. Buchanan Merriman, who have been with her all summer.

On Thursday afternoon the house party gathered itself together and motored in to Boston for the tea and dance aboard the St. George, which Captain G. L. P. Stone, U. S. N., and Mrs. Stone gave for Miss Hanan, Captain Stone, who is the son of Mrs. Britton Saratoga, Washington, is a first cousin of Miss Hanan and also of Miss Gittings.

Ship in Gala Attire, For Merry Party.

The ship was in gala attire and the party quite delightful. Indeed, I don't know of any more accomplished hostess than Katherine Stone.

She had an apartment in Washington winter before last, while Captain Stone was at sea. The Georgia's home port is Boston, so this summer Mrs. Stone and her kiddies are established at one of the pleasant seaside places nearby.

Mr. and Mrs. Stone and Howard were of the Washingtonians at the tea and also "among those present" was that charming Mrs. Edgar Northrop, Dickson, whom you remember as the daughter of a young man, the Siamese Minister, Phya Phrahad, who was married to the little Reeve Lewis boy, aged about seven.

They had their golf bags slung over their shoulders and started out quite seriously to make the round of the links.

The Reeve Lewis youngster came off victorious this time, but after Master Karavongse had congratulated him in the approved style, he confided to the assembled guests that as soon as he was grown up he meant to beat his opponent three up and two to play. "Don't you love it?"

Where the War, Sharks, And Plague Helped Out.

In common with the all and sundry springs scattered about the country, the famous old Eastern Sho' of Maryland has profited by the war in Europe and by the shark and infantile paralysis scare on the Chesapeake coast to the extent of having an unusually gay and crowded season.

At Wade's Point, which isn't very far from Calabrore, there's an interesting little gathering of Washington folk. Mr. and Mrs. Eveleth Whiting and their daughter, Frances, who is the daughter of the daintiest of Washington's "sub-debs," are there to remain until after Labor Day; also Mrs. E. T. Russell, Mrs. C. Stoddard, of Chevy Chase, Mr. Stoddard is just back from Plattsburg.

Douglas Bulloch and the Dawson boys, Tom and Gray, from Rockville, are among the young people at Wade's Point; and Guy Burkhead, who has been there for several weeks, has just come back to town. David Neilson is also back after spending several weeks on the Eastern Shore, and Colonel and Mrs. Richards have returned to their apartment in the Albermarle.

Saratoga Springs Does A Real "Come-Back."

Speaking of summer resorts, it's fair to remark on the way Saratoga Springs "came back" this summer. The famous old resort, with its waters unequalled certainly on this continent and probably in the world, and its associations, political and sporting, certainly came to the front with a vengeance. Not only were the politicians there in full force—not even in the dead days after Governor Hughes gave betting, and every body said racing, its coup de grace, did Saratoga cease to be on the map politically—but society turned out in notable numbers during the racing season to drink the waters, to see the geese run, and, the masculine half of it, perhaps, if the truth be known, to get a line on the situation in New York State.

Both Horses and Gallery Recall Old Times.

It was all quite like old times, and the number and quality of the horses entered as well as the character of the "gallery" which gathered from all quarters of the country to see them settled once for all the moot question of whether there could be racing without betting.

Saratoga had a season of sorts last summer, but nothing to compare with this year. How to account for it? Well, certainly the war, quite possibly New Jersey's infantile paralysis, and the sharks—in the old days I suspect the sharks would have been more at home in Saratoga than in Jersey—and, moreover, I'm willing to wager that the fact that this is campaign year had something to do with the very gay season.

Bonnie Lad Run Under Trainer's Name.

It seemed rather a pity, by the way, that when Edward B. McLean's Bonnie Lad proved himself to be about the best cross-country horse in training, he should be starting under the name of the trainer, owing to the fact that the McLean family is in mourning.

Last year this splendid steeplechaser was bought for $12,500, a record price for the last quarter century, but although great things were expected of him, he didn't get into shape until recently.

At Saratoga he won in the proverbial "walk," in spite of the fact that he carried 116 pounds, and the racing world will watch his future with great interest.

With the Youngsters in The Country for Tennis.

To the country last week for tennis—F. P. A., "our own Samuel Pepys," might phrase it—and met in tournament young people of Woodside, Linden and Forest Glen.

It was ever so jolly to see them all again, old friends of the day when they used to spend our summers at Glen Rose; but it gave me no end of a shock to see the kiddies blossoming into ladies and gentlemen of the court, and to realize that most of the girls and boys I grew up with have growing kiddies of their own.

And Here's a Case of Relation by Marriage.

Katherine Wright, the only one of Dr. Wright's five children who showed any inclination to take up her father's profession, is studying medicine.

She was graduated in June from the University of Wisconsin and afterward she and her mother traveled extensively in the West. July found them in Chicago, where Lewis Wright, who used to live near Katherine and had been a doctor for some time, was living. They made up their minds to be married and decided there was no use coming East to turn round and go back to Chicago.

Honors at Tennis Go To the Benedict Family.

What about the tennis? Well, I was trounced as usual—only more so. The honors of the tournament went to the Benedict family, the sons and daughters of Mr. and Mrs. James Everard Benedict, who managed to clean things up pretty well among them.

Jim Benedict—his name is Everard, Jr.—took the men's singles championship, and with his brother Charlie, won the doubles. Beattie Benedict and Jim won the mixed doubles, playing with her sister, Ruth Benedict, who won the ladies' doubles and then proceeded to cap the climax by winning the singles. They all put up such a fine brand of sportsmanlike tennis that they quite deserved all their honors.

A Real Japanese Tea House. Just Across From the Courts.

Mortimer Clark, who did the stunning settings for several of Mrs. Hemmick's plays last year, came out one afternoon.

His family live just across from the tennis courts and in the dim green depths of their garden he has put up a delectable Japanese tea house of gay red and black.

It opens up in the most approved Oriental fashion by means of sliding screens, and is filled with really lovely Japanese things—a few of them you know, for he's too much of an artist to spoil beautiful things by overcrowding.

Every once in a while he has a few chosen guests for tea, which takes on a new charm from the delightful surroundings and from the unusual sensation of sitting cross-legged on a mat.

Changes of the Year In the Diplomatic Corps.

When the members of the diplomatic corps now scattered quite variously about the Atlantic Coast States return to Washington in the autumn, interest will center in the changes in the personnel of the corps.

A few familiar faces will be missing; a few distinguished newcomers will grace the first social gatherings of the season, and above all there'll be several old friends to welcome after a long absence.

The return of Countess von Bernstorff, who landed last week and accompanied Count von Bernstorff, the German summer embassy at Rio, is of particular interest to Washington. Although it is not likely that there'll be any extensive entertaining as long as the war lasts, it's on the cards that the embassy will play a more important part in social circles than it did when the ambassador maintained his menage en garcon.

Baroness Zwielenek, wife of the Austrian charge d'affaires, is also in this country after an absence of several months, and it is probable that she will spend the winter in Washington.

Japanese and Chilean Ambassadors Gone.

Of those who will "turn up missing" when the diplomatic clans gather in the autumn, the most notable instances are the Japanese ambassador—former Ambassador Chiune Sugawara, who represented Chile. The new ambassador of Chile has not yet been appointed and meanwhile diplomatic business in this country is in charge of Don Gustavo Munizaga-Varela, charge d'affaires, who succeeded Don Enrique Quevas as counselor in the embassy.

The Munizaga-Varela arrived in Washington late in June when most of their colleagues had departed for the summer or the autumn, so that his formal introduction to the corps and to society in general needs to be delayed until after the social season opens in the autumn.

They are charming folk and have four very interesting children. During the summer they are established in a cottage at Chevy Chase.

Viscount China's Successor Due Here in October.

Ambassador China's successor, Almaro Sato, is due to arrive in October; and the new counselor of the Russian embassy, Mr. Onou, another interesting addition to the diplomatic corps, will also come to town in October. With Mr. Onou, he is at New York to stay until the Russian Ambassador and Mme. Bakmeteff close their season.

As you probably remember, the former counselor, Mr. Scherbatov, was promoted to the rank of minister, and now represents his country in Argentina, Brazil and Chile, and Joseph Loria, Melikoff, one of the most popular of the younger men of the embassy, has gone to Lima as minister.

Naval Attache From Argentina A Newcomer.

The naval attache of the Argentine embassy, Capt. Carlos Dalreux, and Mme. Dalreux, who came to town for the marriage of the little Raymond girl and Abel Ezeas, will also be among the new members of the diplomatic contingent.

But isn't it sad to think of Madame Raybaud and her daughter spending the winter in Spain?

I do hope they'll reconsider their decision for the winter, for I've seen in town Zulema Raybaud will be one of the season's debutantes. Her chum, Ellen Bruce Lee, is to be presented, you know.

Norman Hagwood Off To Help 'Em Run the War.

We will not have Norman Hagwood with us in Washington next winter, after all, I am told. There have been various theories about his plans and intentions, among them the interesting view, widely entertained, that he would be a member of the next Cabinet if Mr. Wilson should be elected.

Truth to say, there is so much backing for his idea that despite the announcement of his impending departure for Europe, I lean fondly to the notion that it is likely to prove correct. But, of course, things about the next Cabinet are on the knees of the electorate at this time.

Mr. Hagwood, anyhow, has been very much in and around Washington the last few months, and has come to be extensively rated as the real advisor emeritus to the Administration. Some folks have guessed that Colonel Heuro had nothing on Mr. Hagwood in the matter of influence at 900 Pennsylvania avenue; that's the White House, you know. Perhaps he'll come back if Mr. Wilson does.

At the moment he is making plans to spend the next year or two or three in Europe; helping 'em run the war, and then sticking on the job to help make the peace terms. He is going to write about matters and things in Europe, for the American press; which is at least an advance that we'll get some more interesting stuff from that part of the world, and some glimpses under the surface of things.

I notice among the social notes of Bar Harbor a little statement to the effect that Mr. Joseph Pulitzer has thrown open her estate, Chatsworth, for an exhibition of sculpture by Jo Davidson. I'm wondering if Mr. Davidson's bust of President Wilson, the official entry into the academic fold. Six years ago it was considered by the academicians as a radical look upon him as too old for to be a modern at all, so great is the speed with which modern art progresses.

Has Traveled and Studied in Many Countries.

Jo Davidson is that rare bird, a New Yorker born on Manhattan Island. He has traveled and studied in Italy, Spain, France, Russia, and England, and his list of portrait busts is long and interesting. It includes Lord Northcliffe, Ambassador Page, Rabindranath Tagore, Joseph Conrad, Ralph Pulitzer, Hawthorne, Ellis, and Mrs. Hobart Chatsworth-Taylor.

Mr. Davidson makes his home in the south of France, high up in the Pyrenees, where Mrs. Davidson and the two boys of the younger generation are living with hospital work. He saw service himself, first as war correspondent and then as a stretcher bearer. He will be in New York until spring, and expects to have a one-man exhibition of his work this fall. I'm hoping that later on we'll have a chance to see his bust of the President and perhaps some of his other work here. Hence this biography.

Society Has Shown Interest in Art.

Not only at Bar Harbor, but at Newport and other resorts, the fashionable set has been showing this summer a commendable interest in art. Indeed, the Art Association has proved itself a real feature of the Newport season. It's always nice to see your garden as some artist sees it, and have others see it too, so Miss Carlisle's collection of garden pictures—they were shown here last winter—were greatly enjoyed. Then came the Montgomery Roosevelt portrait, and for a place de resistance Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney's sculptures.

These were particularly interesting to the members of the Washington colony who knew Mrs. Whitney's beautiful statue of Mount Vernon, the American Union Building and who were anxious to see the other splendid fountain model for the Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco, which, it is said, will be set up permanently in Washington in the New Arlington Hotel—if the hotel ever becomes more than a promise and a pipe dream.

The most spectacular thing in the exhibition is Mrs. Whitney's original model for the Titanic memorial, which stands at the head of the stairs, thrown into high relief by a purple background. It is a study in black marble of the head of the figure. The other day a friend studied the head closely and said to Mrs. Whitney, "You must have looked far for such a model."

Titanic Figure Is Result of Inspiration.

"I did not have a model for the Titanic figure," Mrs. Whitney replied, "with the inspiration of that great tragedy, it just came to me." Near by there's a particularly charming head, the "Spanish Peasant," which has been purchased by the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York.

Mrs. Whitney has also put on exhibition a fine collection of the works of modern artists, paintings by Frank Brangwyn, Maxfield Parrish and Jules Guerin, a number of excellent portraits, a marble by John La Farge, drawings by Cecilia Beaux, scores of really worth while examples of modern art in sculpture, bronze, water color and crayon, and, not the least interesting, originals by Leon Bakst of characters, which appeared in the Ballet Russe last winter.

There, if I don't stop soon I'll be caught between the Scylla of a lecture and the Charybdis of a catalogue, so I'll bring my letter to a close.

Affectionately yours,
JEAN ELIOT.

How to Judge a Woman by Her Hair

There are always the well-known and semi-humorous methods, such as saying brunettes are quick-tempered. But there is real common sense in not noticing whether the hair is well kept to judge a woman's neatness. If you are one of the few who try to make the most of your hair, remember that it is not advisable to wash the hair with any cleanser made for all purposes, but always use some good preparation made expressly for shampooing. You can enjoy the very best by getting some canthrox from your druggist and dissolving a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water when your shampoo is all ready. After its use the hair dries rapidly with uniform color. Canthrox, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its lustre and softness will also delight you, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth.
